Plover Church Burns.
Although the electric storm of Monday evening did no damage in the immediate vicinity of Grand Rapids, the people of Plover suffered somewhat of a loss in the complete destruction of their Catholic church. The building was struck by a ball of lightning at about eight o'clock, near the time of the heavy crash that was heard here, and reports from Plover state that all efforts to save the structure were fruitless, in fact the attention of the fire fighters had to be directed to the school and parsonage in order to prevent them from being caught by the spreading flames.

—Guns and ammunition, latest records of all kinds, talking machines, Cutlery, toys and bicycles must be sold out at Gen. Krueger & Co's., opposite market square, west side 2t.

The Walker marsh is recognized as one of the foremost bogs in this section of the country and is year by year being provided with more modern and up to date improvements. The new canal will not only insure a free use of the water when flood is needed, but will serve as an efficient means of transportation. A gasoline launch will be introduced to carry off the picked berries.

Married on His Deathbed.
Rockford, Minn. —Lying on his death bed last night, Mr. H. L. Lamm of Nekoosa, Wis., was married Sunday morning at 9 o'clock to Miss Bertha Hesse of La Crosse, and 25 hours later the young bride was a widow.

Mr. Lamm's death occurred shortly after 11 o'clock Monday night, after he had submitted to two operations for a sudden and critical attack of appendicitis.

Mr. Lamm was taken to the hospital from his home last week Wednesday and submitted to the first operation Thursday morning. Few hopes for his recovery were held out by the attending surgeons after the operation and when it was made known to him that a second operation was to be performed with small chances for recovery he went to his death.

Following out the wishes of the dying man and his sweetheart the wedding ceremony was performed in the hospital Sunday morning at 9 o'clock in the presence of Mr. Lamm's brother, doctors and nurses, and the second operation was performed in the afternoon.

From the effects of the second operation, the stricken man never rallied and he died rapidly until death relieved his sufferings Monday night, his bride and mother being constantly at his bedside. —Winona Independent.

Base Ball News.
Last Thursday afternoon, Aug. 11th the local team had the pleasure of inflicting a crushing defeat upon the Chicago Union Grays, one of the best team teams in the country. The visitors, to say the least, were greatly perplexed to see the home team pull off four runs in the first inning, however their own score in the first inning was somewhat and their determination became even more noticeable. Another score by Grand Rapids in the second brought the score up to 5 and 1 and there it stood till the close of the game. On Saturday the players commenced a series of three games with Merrill and reports from up the line give the news that Merrill took the small end of the score each game, the last one being played on Monday. But the Union Grays will return here Friday to play a game that can't help but be exciting and interesting, considering the fact that the team have finally decided to leave Grand Rapids with a scalp to match the three taken from Merrill.

The Oshkosh team deliberately failed to show up last Sunday, offering several excuses when called up by phone but it appears to be rather a case of cold feet than anything else. Not only did they fail to appear on the scene but also failed to send any message until they were called up by long distance. On account of the failure of Oshkosh to present themselves a game was pulled off between the regulars and the Colts which proved an interesting contest. Foster and Nelson lined up with the second team making the situation more evenly balanced. The regulars scored one in the first and one in the second, and the Colts came home twice in the eighth, making it look as though the game would go to extra innings, but in the last of the ninth the first team got in one run before any were down and the game stood three to two. The lineup was as follows:

Regulars: Powell, cf; Shriner, 3b; Gregory, ss; Truesdell, c; Dierker 2b; A. Cronins, 1b; Brennan, lf; Nah p; Dolan, rf.

Colts: Kamps, cf; Loock, 3b; A. Smith, ss; Nelson, c; Fahrner, 2b; Lane, 1b; Brown, lf; Foster, p; C. Smith, rf.

Everything was completely destroyed, however, fortunately there were no animals in the building at the time. The loss is estimated at about $100, $1000 being covered by insurance.

A larger barn belonging to Walter Campbell of Carson, was also struck and entirely destroyed causing a loss of between five and six hundred dollars after covering insurance. The contents of the barn which were insured at about $1200 were lost.

There will now be a thirty five foot left, a thirty foot depth, and the stage will extend the full width of the house. ## SOME SOUND ADVICE TO OUR FARMERS

Contributed by L. M. Nash
Editor of Grand Rapids Tribune:
I wrote with great pleasure the offer made by the Banks for furnishing funds to enable farmers to purchase hay for their winter supply, and to say the least, was very much pleased as it shows the good feeling that exists between farmers, merchants and banks. These are the kind of people that make a country prosperous and in this connection I would like to help a little if I can. Namely, to furnish names to farmers or dealers who have hay for sale in the west. I have over a hundred names and I will be pleased to give copies of them to the farmers, and if farmers want me to do so, where they will order hay for them by the carload free of charge. Where our company buys hay and it is shipped over goods are loaded the same as our goods are handled, we could not do this as there is an expense attached to the business. While these suggestions and offers are very good, I think it is advisable to have farmers and others offer and give a little experience on economy about how to feed and handle their cattle when feed is short.

One of the suggestions I would make would be for the farmers to pull out their feed cutters from some hole in the barn and place it in the middle of the barn floor and cut up everything in the way of oats and rye straw as well as corn stalks. They will find that this class of rough feed will go nearly twice as far as when it is fed in the straw. If they are obliged to put a little feed with it, I consider it cheaper to ship feed in than hay.

Another advantage that I can see for the farmer in the way of saving is to sow rye immediately, and after it has a good start let the cattle pasture on it both in the fall and spring when it is frozen. This year I pastured sheep and cattle in my rye field until the 15th of June and then stood out as good a farm for years. Rye will continue to grow the same as grass as long as it is kept fed down, while wheat and oats would kill out immediately if it was fed off.

If there was any prospect of rain within the near future I would advise the farmers to sow millet, for if the frost kept off for a reasonable length of time they could get a good crop of hay and if it did not mature it would make good forage for milch cows in the fall and spring.

UNDERTAKERS BORN NOT MADE—RAGAN.
Fond du Lac Correspondent:—John R. Ragan of Grand Rapids, Wis., in conducting an experience hour at the undertakers' convention declared that undertakers were born and not made. "There are some who think a short term in an embalming school and a diploma are the only requisites of an undertaker," said Mr. Ragan; "but this is very much of a mistake. It is only the beginning. A man to be successful in the undertaking must possess tact, ability and represent a high type of manhood. The day when undertakers were harsh in their conduct and ruled the family into which they were called have changed, and now the undertakers are the ones that are ruled if they hope to succeed. Anything that does not mean the right type of manhood, and gentlemanly conduct on the part of an undertaker at all times, means that his competitor will soon put him out of business."

On Saturday the players commenced a series of three games with Merrill and reports from up the line give the news that Merrill took the small end of the score each game, the last one being played on Monday. But the Union Giants will return here Friday to play a game that can't help but be exciting and interesting, considering the fact that the teams have fully decided to leave Grand Rapids with a scalp to match the three taken from Merrill.

The Oshkosh team deliberately failed to show up last Sunday, offering several excuses when called up by phone; but it appears to be rather a case of cold feet than anything else. Not only did they fail to appear on the scene but also failed to send up by message until they were called up by long distance. On account of the failure of Oshkosh to present themselves a game was pulled off between the regulars and the Colts which proved an interesting contest. Foster and Nelson lined up with the seconds thus making the situation more evenly balanced. The regulars scored once in the first and once in the second, and the Colts came home twice in the eighth, making it look as though the game would go to extra innings, but in the last of the fifth the first team got in one run before any were down and the game stood three to two. The lineup was as follows:

Regulars. Powell, cf; Shriver, 3b; Gregory, ss; Trageser, c; Dietzer 2b; A. Crowne, 1b; Brennan, rf; Nahl p; Dolan, rf.
Colts. Kamps, cf; Loock, 3b; A. Smith, 2b; Nelson, c; Fahrner, 2b; Lane, 1b; Brown, lf; Foster, p; O. Smith, rf.

Barn Struck.

J. Stelzer of the town of Carson suffered quite a heavy loss as a result of the severe electric storm Monday evening. At about 7:30 o'clock while Mr. Stelzer was transacting business in Rudolph the large barn containing his entire hay and grain crop was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Everything was completely destroyed, however, fortunately there were no animals in the building at the time. The loss is estimated at about $1400, $1000 being covered by insurance.

A larger barn belonging to Walter Campbell of Carson, was also struck and entirely destroyed causing a loss of between five and six hundred dollars after covering insurance. The contents of the barn which were insured at about $1200 were lost.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Slatery and daughter Marguerite of Sturgeon Bay are in the city renewing old acquaintances and visiting their friends.

Stage Being Enlarged.

Daly's Theatre is at the present time undergoing a few alterations, which when complete will add greatly to the conditions in and about the stage. An up to date water heating system is being installed, the dressing rooms are being improved, more dressing rooms are being put in, and the stage, which heretofore has been only twenty-six feet wide, twenty feet deep, and thirty feet high is being enlarged so that the dimensions will be greatly increased. There will now be a thirty-five foot loft, a thirty foot depth, and the stage will extend the full width of the house. George Miller is the architect in charge, and the work will probably be complete by Sept. 1st, however the work is being arranged so that the opera house may be used for all ordinary purposes while the construction is going on.

he was thinking of himself. Craven, he was as well as mightfully at large. The name of himself was a prison, standing, as it did, 12 miles from any railway, dominating, as it did, the entire county of —shire. Craven was a fortress for the writer's hours of labor — a pleasure-garden for his leisure — a home to him on this occasion. He came out to it for the only fresh atmosphere it afforded to his work. — even was not to afford to this seclusion, any of its attractive tone — nor was it demanded that it should suggest a new theme, or even erode an old idea. Mr. Teasdale, a solitary inhabitant of his study, asked a new bath of his retreat —

November had almost gone, and the drear barrenness of the landscape, although not yet despoiled of leafage, was hidden on this afternoon by a mist full of rain. Tempest had the extent of blank gloom before him when he faced it by the window, leaning against his work-table, his back to the room. Something of the leaden quality of the outside reflected itself in his countenance, but he had not time to follow his meditations to their end, for a rap on the door fell once—was repeated, then the door opened and his housekeeper came in.

"A beg pardon, Mr. Hast—" He did not stir.

She waited a moment, then ad-

"What the devil have you done?" he asked, not unkindly. "It can't be worse than coming here to me after my express injunctions."

"It's worse, sir," she nodded. "I've let in a lady."

She breathed freer with the whole confession of her crime's enormity.

Tempest's surprise was as sharp as his displeasure. "A lady—you're daft?"

"She meant, 'I couldn't help it, Mr. Basil—she had walked from Cravenford—to see you, sir—and I hadn't the

Square Hole Easily Bored

Simple Explanation Disproves General Idea That Achievement is an Impossibility.

It would seem, on first thought, an impossibility to bore a square hole. In reality nothing is simpler. The basis of the operation is the fact that as a circle rolls on a straight line, the center describes a parallel straight ridge wheel moves along at a constant distance from the ground. Hence if we cause a cutter situated at the center of a cylindrical shank to revolve on a straight guide the cutter will trace out a straight line. If the guide be broken into four sides of a square the shank will roll on these four sides one after the other, and the cutter willream out an equal square.

"I do forbid," he said shortly. "If it's a tiresome reason—I won't say women's reasons are usually tiresome, for I am sure they never give the real ones—nothing would be so delightful. I am willing to believe, as a woman's sincere motive or reason for what she does! It's a black rose, a 'merle blanche.' Miss Carew, I've never seen any of the three."

She did not take this opportunity to remark at his psychology of feminine subtleties, but said equally:

"The result of such forbidding would be the blocking of my whole career."

White at the neck and wrists. It fitted her well, it fell well around her supple figure.

"My gloves," she said apologetically, "were soaked through. They are drying in your housekeeper's room. I dried there myself for half an hour before she would disturb you."

She spoke so demurely, she crossed Tempest's feelings, growing more and more amiable and gracious, a sudden revulsion against her which she could not have understood had he let her perceive it.

"How can I further your career or hinder it?" he asked formally.

She did not appear to take umbrage at his altered tone but, leaning forward in her seat, received him into her confidence with extraordinary familiarity and an assurance that was compliment in itself.

tool is a rotary one, very similar to boring a round hole. The only trouble is that as the shank changes from round to square, the guide on one side of the square guide to the adjacent one there is a slight irregularity in the motion, so that the corners of the square hole are not sharp, but slightly rounded. This rounding may be reduced to a minimum and it is not a serious objection in any case.

Curtiss also gave striking proof of the utility of the aeroplane in war by dropping sham bombs on the outline of the Atlantic coast marked out on the sands.

London.—Sir Robert Anderson, formerly head of the criminal investigation department at Scotland Yard, in his reminiscences in Blackwood's Magazine, tells the following story:

"A genius claimed to have discovered the secret of making gold, and he offered to sell it to a great city firm—a house whose name is in high waste of time, for the process was tedious one.

"Finally it was arranged that he should have $100,000 in sovereigns and a house was taken in Lombard street, Whitechapel, and there a laboratory was fitted up for his use. The gold was placed in tanks provided for the purpose, the needed chemicals were supplied, and the experiment proceeded, with elaborate precautions against larceny or fraud.

There he learned wireless telegraphy, and when he returned to the place where he was boarded on the floor above the apartment occupied by the Rooney family, he rigged up a wireless station on the roof. Here he taught Annabelle how to send and take messages, and this knowledge was turned to Cupid's account when Connelly asked Annabelle's parents for her hand, only to be laughed at as a boy by her father. The Southwestern flier drew up at Canaan Junction. It never stopped. It consists of four boxes on a center track long enough to plot at present with a germanium bed

"It's hot enough down here, isn't it?" She watched him drain the tin cup a second time before she answered: "We don't mind it much."

"I suppose not. I came from the north. Don't suppose you know anybody here named Acton?"

The girl's hand closed tightly over the package of letters she had drawn from the mail sack. Her back was to ward him. But her voice was steady and natural.

"No, I don't."

"You'd be pretty likely to know, handling all the mail, and so on, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, yes, I would know. I know the name of everybody in this town!"

"Except mine."

He came over to the ledge and

it, "J. P. Dexter."

Nell leaned her hands on the desk and waited tensely. She had forgotten to hide the letters.

"Well, honey girl, the cat wouldn't stay put, would it? And you going to all this trouble just to try and save your name from himself." The colored woman spoke very calmly, very reflectively, almost with a glint of humor in his blue eyes, as he saw the look on Nell's face. "When did Jack Dexter get here?"

"Father, listen." She put both hands up on his shoulders and beamed her face against his chin. "She was just about as sweet with his chin."

"You must make this truth, Susie, when you know you're in the right, it doesn't matter what other people

The telegraph instrument set up its call, and she sat down to answer it. When she rose her face was flushed slightly, and anybody who knew her would have been surprised that the woman on the war path, Jopman, the town nearest the state line, was asking about Colonel Acton. Cannan Junction again stated that the party was unknown there.

"Is there a chief of police here in town?"

"A chief of police?" She flashed a startled glance at him. "No. There's a constable. He's the undertaker, too."

"Nice, handy combination," he laughed. "You people down here in this small, new town certainly couldn't have a public constable. Thanks, I'll hunt him up. Goodby."

"Goodby." She watched him as he went along the road towards the main street, his long, easy strides kicking up a flurry of dust behind him.

The whistle over at the factory was blowing for another hour, and she picked up the receiver and called a number.

"I have a good dinner before we start north tonight. 'He put up one hand as Jack started to explain, and shook his head warily as he tried for explanation. I understand the situation thoroughly. I don't want to disturb Nellie here, with any of the details."

"But, Colonel Acton," Jack exclaimed. "You don't know what I'm after, sir. I came down to let you know that that indictment is signed and that I have a passport. The whole lot is waiting to welcome you back, if you'll only come. The president of the bank confessed to the full amount, swore he had made a receipt of you, sir, and then gracefully committed suicide. It was the wisest thing he'd done in five years."

"Well, now that's too bad," the colonel said, regretfully. "He need not have done that. I was comfortable down here. It's home to Nell and myself. In fact, we feel rather responsible for the future of Cannan. Mighty nice of you to come and tell me that."

"I wanted to be the first to tell you, sir," Dexter's hand gripped the colonel's closely. "A crowd of the news-

“In a rush, aren’t they?” laughed the colonel, wiping off his forehead.

“Just give my little girl your arm along Main street. I’ll lock up the station and carry the suitcase until the next train comes along. No, sir, I can’t permit it, as my guest, you will allow me to have my way.” Jack hesitated still, looking down at the heavy suitcase, and the colonel gave him a delicate poke in the side. “Ladies first, sir, right about face—forward, march!”

To the Farmers of Wisconsin.

September 6 falls in your busiest season.

It is certain that on that day a good many duties will be pressing themselves upon you. The runs and toilers will need attention, perhaps, and we hope there will be plenty of it to meet that attention. The fall would be working overtime, and it will seem to you that the quicker you and the men get after them the better. Something wrong may have broken out in the barn, or in the dairy, or in the poultry yard. Many are the cares and responsibilities of modern farming even in this great state of successful agriculture—Wisconsin.

But among all the duties of that day there is one that is paramount. September 6 brings the primary election. It brings a duty that does not call for action very often. It is a duty to yourselves, to your families, to your neighbors, to all the people of Wisconsin, to the people of the great republic, and even to the millions of alien peoples who look upon you as free men and fortunate men who are working out for yourselves and for them the great experiment of self government.

It brings, moreover, a duty to the Democratic party. You who have stood steadfastly by the principles in which you believe, who have faced defeat in election after election, are again called upon to evidence your loyalty to Democracy. The situation is a critical one, perhaps more critical than any which has ever faced the Democratic party in this state.

Briefly the facts are these: A Republican legislature has passed a law requiring us to poll in each county at the primary September 6, twenty per cent of the Democratic vote cast by William J. Bryan in 1908. Failing in this, the Democratic party loses its column on the ballot in the November election.

The seriousness of the situation can be realized only when we recall that in previous primary elections, the Democratic vote has averaged only about five per cent of the purely straight.

Send these facts broadcast. Tell your neighbors what an unfair law the Republican party in the state has enacted, designed to destroy the Democratic party. Let us arouse the fighting spirit in every Democrat which will send him to the polls both on September 6th and on November 8, and which will result in sending such a group of honest Democratic legislators to Madison that the infamous twenty per cent clause of the primary law will be repealed.

No greater duty, no plainer, more unambiguous duty, no more inspiring duty rests upon any individual than upon you. It is often said, and said truthfully, that upon the farmers depends the prosperity of the nation. And this is true not only of its material prosperity, but also of its political and moral prosperity.

Therefore, let the national duties wait upon the performance of the higher duty on this day of the Wisconsin primaries. Let the corn and tobacco wait your ears a few hours let the complications in the dairy or the stable go for a time. Lift up the young colts you are proud of, or the old bay mare. Take the hired man with you and go to the polling place to do your duty by voting as a true Democrat.

Do not wait for election day. September 6 is the critical day in Wisconsin this year. Mark it on the calendar and not when that day comes.

Scheme To Buy Stock Cheap

An ingenious plan to create a panic in the mind of the farmer who has more stock than he wishes to carry in this dry time and thus buy his surplus cattle at a very low price is being worked in many parts of the west, and is said to have reached this locality. It takes three men to work this scheme successfully; the first buyer comes to the farmer's place and offers him a soundlessly low price for his stock with the assurance that within a few days the price will go much lower. If the farmer holds out as he usually will, the first buyer moves on and in a day or two another buyer drops in who offers much less for the stock than the first one, emphatically asserting that the market has dropped in a sharp decline. The stock owner is sold at any price. If the farmer still holds out, a third man usually a known buyer, drops in and offers about what the first man said was the correct and the farmer, generally accepts the figure gladly after the scare he has been given by fake buyer No. 1.

Farmers should be on the lookout for this game as well as all other schemes to induce them to sell good stock at low prices. It is dangerous to sell at a time like this without getting prices from all available sources, and the good buyers and proved ones should be kept at any cost.—Marshfield Times.

Lead Poisoning.

Lead poisoning in cattle usually takes place during the remodeling of buildings, painting of water tanks, fences etc., or even while painting houses, painters thoughtlessly scrape the old paint and dump it out into the barn yard where cattle have access to the result being that within a short time one or more animals are affected in a more or less acute way, and the good buyers and proved ones should be kept at any cost.—Marshfield Times.

PITTSVILLE.

(From the Record.)

At the annual meeting of the Pittsville State Bank last Thursday, July 28th the following directors were elected for the ensuing year: R. H. Salter, Robt. Connor, Isaac Erickson, Ed. Clark, J. P. Seidl, F. P. Hilts, T. J. Crowley. Out of this personnel the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Robt. Connor; Vice President, E. B. Salter; Cashier, T. J. Crowley. The matter of a new banking building was considered and on vote it was found to be the sense of the meeting that a new bank building be erected. The work of building will be commenced and completed this fall, the building is to be of solid brick, and to contain all the modern conveniences of vaults and safety deposit boxes, etc. The choice of a site has been left with a committee of three, J. P. Seidl, Isaac Erickson and T. J. Crowley, to determine, and it is very likely that the new bank building will be put up on the corner opposite the Pittsville Hardware Co.'s store or between the Salter store and the residence of Dr. Hogen, the latter, we understand, being the favorite also with the committee.

O. J. Brown and family arrived in the city from Baraboo Monday night and will open on the L. Ward Hotel under the name of "Hotel Brown." Mr. Brown traded property in Baraboo for the hotel, and will run a livery in connection with the hotel business. He will be ready for business almost immediately.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

No Need to Take Any Further Risks.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Donn's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. One Grand Rapids resident demands more convincing proof than the following:

Donn's, 413 Fremont St., Stevens Point, Wis., says: "I had more or less trouble from my kidneys for several years. These organs were weak and the secretions passed too frequently. At times I was in misery on account of the terrible pains in my kidneys. I tried many remedies but was not helped until I began taking Donn's Kidney Pills. They relieved me promptly and in two months I was cured."

Mr. Borg had been in feeble health for nearly a year and during the past few weeks suffered a complete physical breakdown. He was 49 years old and leaves a widow and six children—Charles, Corollino, Donna, Gustav, Joseph and Alice, the youngest being seven years of age. Deceased was a member of Nekoosa camp No. 2376, holding an insurance certificate for $1000 in that order.

The ladies of Sacred Heart Catholic church will give a picnic in the park opposite the church at Nekoosa on Sunday afternoon, August 14, to which everybody is invited.

It is reported that Dan Lynch, who is serving life sentence in state prison for the murder of Andrew Nonenous in the town of Sasegoa two years ago, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat a couple of weeks ago, prison officials preventing him just in time from accomplishing his purpose.

WORM PEST ON POTATO PLANTS.

Marquette and Portage counties farmers have appealed to the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin for relief against a worm pest which is destroying their potato crop in a manner similar to the way the grasshoppers formerly destroyed the western crops. These worms are from an inch and a half to four inches in length and range in color from a dark brown to a light gray. They do not seem to come from any field, but a farmer goes out in his field in the morning to find millions of worms eating his crops. A half a minute for each worm seems to be the speed at which they eat up the crops.

Building Sanitary Homes.

One of the most encouraging signs of success in the work of Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association for the prevention of consumption is the wide adoption of the new idea in rural Wisconsin. Hundreds of homes built in Wisconsin this year make ample provision for open air sleeping, the need not only of consumption but of many other diseases and result from close confinement, bad air, insectivorous chambers and lack of sunlight.

Architects and builders have recognized the demand of the day for dwellings which will not sicken or make people feel uncomfortable. The number and area of porches has increased in response to the demand for sleeping quarters that make for health and comfort. No time in the history of civilization has so much attention been paid to the general sanitary features of the home.

Were all these things done simply and exclusively for the sake of the tuberculosis, or those predisposed, or those who wish to keep consumption far from themselves, they would be of incalculable value, but while doing these things we are actually curing disease that mankind is heir to, again proving that the anti-tuberculosis crusade is the greatest boon to the general health of the general public."

"For at the same time that the root of the tuberculosis evil is being struck at, the preconditions of sane, sanitary living apply to all other diseases. It is truly said, therefore, that the anti-tuberculosis crusade, by influencing effort for the prevention of other diseases, is actually insuring to health making for a marked uplift in living and working conditions of the masses, and proclaiming the gospel of fresh air and right living, is rendering to the world's greater service than the most important movements of the ages.

Baby Lions.

During the month of October, 1907, at the Campbell Brothers' Circus, Traveling on its way to the next town, two animal keepers were seen to be keeping close watch over one of the cages. It was the cause of this night vigil? When the circus arrived at its duties in the beautiful town of Excelsior Springs, Mo., they were greeted by the great news that Carlotta, the Arabian lioness, was giving birth to two tiny cubs. Great was the excitement of the Campbell Brothers; also the curiosity of the members of the show; requests were made to Bill, the animal man, "Please Mr. Bill, can't I have just one peep at the dear little things?" only to be refused; for a week the mother and her young were kept in a darkened cage, under close watch, that she might not be molested.

After ten days' careful watching the den was opened up and the mother with her little ones became the hotel attraction for all daily visitors. The cubs are now the feature of the menagerie, being a little over 8 months old; they are as playful as kittens, and can be handled by any one. Campbell Brothers offer you a chance of a lifetime, to see a pair of baby lions, so bring the children and let them see this grand lioness and her cubs. This is only one of the many wonderful features to be seen with Campbell Brothers' Great Consolidated Shows which are to exhibit in Grand Rapids, Wis., Monday, August 22.

Come early and see the grand street parade that will start promptly at 10 a. m.

When the Son Marries.

It is natural that a little heartache should come to the mother when she finds that another stands first in the heart of the boy she has held so long; but as she will see him away from her and an added bond between her son and herself in the daughter's love. The wife is the queen of the new home, but we may still be the queen mother and our first duty, in the new relationship should be to find all the good points in the wife's character. If she has faults which are possible, she should be sorry, but not censorious. Nothing will set us apart from the dear ones so quickly or so effectively as to begin open training of the daughter-in-law, and we should be able to bring her up to all her little failings, both for her own and children's sake. So, too, your training of your son must stop. He is a man now, with a man's responsibilities and he must think for himself. If he asks your advice, or if the new daughter turns to you for counsel, give it freely, but give it lovingly, with due realization that you may be an act of oversteering on their part, and so do not feel aggrieved if they should prefer their own way. Do not allow yourself to be too sensitive, and to take as the voice of rebellion any little seeming neglect, either of your presence or of your opinions. Do not attempt to revise their household affairs, or to settle their disputes; in fact, let them manage their own home, and be sure that offenses must come but was into the one by whom the offense cometh." If it be an outsider, especially if it be the mother, whom every daughter-in-law is taught to look upon as her arch enemy, because of their mutual love for one man. Let them learn their lessons, spelling out each word without being from you. Let it be your business to keep their love, for as you go down into the valley, it will be the one star that will relieve earth's darkness of its terror.—Helen Hunt, in Commoner.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council Chamber, Aug. 2nd, 1910.

Council met in regular session. Mayor Wheelan presiding. Alderman present, Andrews, Bamberg, Abel, Billmyre, Davis, Pantar, Getzloff, Lukasecki, Gilmanter, Jackson, Pribbanow, Nash, Mosher, Payne, and Jeffrey. Alderman absent, Ellis.

On motion, reading the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with.

The finance committee reported on the bill of A. L. Pontaine for printing the liquor license applications as follows:— We find that the bill is correct insofar as the number of folios printed are concerned, but that the printer placed a heading on each of the applications which is not a part of the application as required by the statutes.

The hearing consisted of three words and in about twenty of the applications there were but 103 words, the three words being counted as the second folio. Therefore you see by counting said three words in each case as an extra folio and at 60 cents per folio for first insertion and 35 cents for each of two subsequent publications makes an extra charge of $36.00. We do not consider the heading placed on these by the printer a part of the application and therefore in our opinion $26.00 should be deducted from the bill as filed and the same allowed at $55.00.

Finance committee. J. J. Jeffrey.

On motion, the report was referred back to the finance committee to report at the next meeting of the council.

The committee on sidewalks reported on the petition of Geo. L. Williams and others praying for a crosswalk on Third Street South, connecting the sidewalk on the easterly side with the one on the westerly side at or near the southeast corner of the E. W. Ellis home lot, recommending that the prayer of the petitioners be granted and that a crosswalk be put in at the second block from Caynor's corner.

On motion, the report was adopted and the sidewalk committee authorized and instructed to have the work carried out by unanimous vote, the clerk calling the roll.

There was presented a petition signed by Kruger & Warner and 56 others praying your Honorable Body to lay and construct street crossing on Vine street at the intersection of said street with Second street from the Wood County National Bank to M. Mr. C. J. Fay, Station Agent, M. St. P. & Ste. M. Ry. Co. City.

Dear Sir:—I beg to advise you of the following action of the council of Grand Rapids, upon the following matters, to wit:

1st. The City Attorney and Mayor were instructed to notify the railroad companies to improve their street crossings throughout the city, so as to make them passable, and level with the adjacent road bed. At the present time most every railroad crossing in the city is in such condition that it is really impossible to cross the same faster than a walk without danger of being thrown out of your conveyance. I wish you to take immediate action in the matter.

2d. We wish to give you notice that we do not want any more board or plank sidewalks; that all sidewalks hereafter constructed by you be constructed of cement according to our standard sidewalks. Of course between your tracks, you can use whatever you want to, but wherever a sidewalk proper is constructed whether on the side of the street or as part of the street crossing, outside of the center of the tracks, the same must be constructed of cement. Beginning next year in the spring,

Grand Rapids, Wis., Aug. 1, 1910.

WISCONSIN VOTERS

Even if you do not raise barley, Mr. Farmer, and would not be directly effected by the loss of the Brewery market for 21,000,000 bushels of this Wisconsin grain annually, valued at $14,500,000, do you realize that the present growers of barley would then have to raise other grains and would then become market competitors of yours?

The brewing industry annually buys $3,364,000 worth of other farm products in Wisconsin.

Perhaps you are not employed in a brewery, Mr. Workman, but there are 14,600 Wisconsin men who are and who would have to swarm the other trades if County Option should prevail. Also 27,000 men now in the retail trade would become candidates for your workbench or lathe.

The brewing industry pays over $10,000,000 each year to labor.

Mr. Taxpayer, the brewers now pay annual local taxes and license fees totaling more than $3,500,000, which you would have to supply under a County Option system.

County Option will bring this competition and burden.

The finance committee reported on the bill of A. L. Fontaine for printing the liquor license applications as follows:—We find that the bill is correct insofar as the number of folios printed are concerned, but that the printer placed a heading on each of the applications which is not a part of the application as required by the statutes.

The heading consisted of three words and in about twenty of the applications there were but 103 words, the three words being counted as the second folio. Therefore you see by counting said three words in each case as an extra folio and at 60 cents per folio for first insertion and 35 cents for each of two subsequent publications makes an extra charge of $26.00. We do not consider the heading placed on these by the printer a part of the application and therefore in our opinion $26.00 should be deducted from the bill as filed and the same allowed at $55.90.

The following communications were received by the mayor from the railway companies in regard to street crossings, cross walks and sidewalks, July 14, 1910.

Mr. C. J. Fay, Station Agent, M. St. P. & St. M. Ry. Co., City.

Dear Sir:—I beg to advise you of the following action of the council of Grand Rapids, upon the following matters, to wit:

1st. The City Attorney and Mayor were instructed to notify the railroad companies to improve their street crossings throughout the city, so as to make them passable, and level with the adjacent road bed. At the present time most every railroad crossing in the city is in such condition that it is really impossible to cross the same faster than a walk without danger of being thrown out of your conveyance. I wish you to take immediate action in the matter.

2d. We wish to give you notice that we do not want any more board or plank sidewalks; that all sidewalks hereafter constructed by you be constructed of cement according to our standard sidewalks. Of course between your tracks, you can use whatever you want to, but wherever a sidewalk proper is constructed whether on the side of the street or as part of the street crossing, outside of the center of the tracks, the same must be constructed of cement. Beginning next year in the spring, we will have all of your plank sidewalks torn up and removed in accordance with the foregoing action.

If for any reason you take exception to the foregoing, kindly advise us as to the foregoing, as we have every desire to have these matters adjusted amicably, as we have every desire to have every possible favor and courtesy to the railroad companies at this point, consistent with safety and with our rights.

Yours, etc.,

Wassau, Wis., July 15, 1910.

We will of course be only too glad to comply with any of your regulations. I understand our sidewalks are in very good order at the present time and I hardly think any of them should be condemned this fall. It may be possible that some will have to be renewed in the spring and in which event we will of course comply with your instructions.

Finding Fighters for Uncle Sam

THE war department is trying to find ways and means to increase the number of recruits at the United States Military academy. Since the Spanish war, when the army was enlarged, there have not been anywhere near enough graduates to fill the vacancies in the commissioned ranks of the army. The result has been that not only has it been necessary to promote to the rank of second lieutenant, enlisted men of the army who can pass the required examination, but to appoint each year to the service large numbers of civilians.

Naturally enough the war department officials feel that the commissioned officers should be men educated to the profession of a soldier. There seems to be a pretty general feeling, one hard for the authorities to account for by the way, that every man in a horn a soldier and that the military profession is the only one for which no special training is required. Gen. Winfield Scott, at the close of the Mexican war, said that if it had not been for the officers of the military academy the graduates of the military academy the war would have been prolonged for years. This praise of the institution and the men whom it turns out was given by a man not a graduate, and who, therefore, could not be said to be prejudiced in favor of the institution.

The course at West Point is a particularly hard one and a good many cadets are found deficient every year, generally in only one study. West Point, however, differs from all other schools of the world. There they do not strike an average of studies, taking all the lessons taught in a lump. For instance, if a man stands at the head of his class in four studies, but is a little bit below the proficient average in one study, the authorities throw him out, whereas in other schools they would strike an average and give such a man a high standing.

The result of such a system as this is that men who are qualified for the service in practically every way, but who may be a little lame in French or a trifle off in logic or chemistry, are separated from the army to which they might possibly be a credit. If an average of excellence was struck by the authorities, it is quite often the case that men who do not graduate but who have had several years' training at the academy succeed in getting commissions in the service. There are no records to show that any man who spent two years at West Point failed to pass his examination for a commission after he had been successful in getting an appointment to the army from civil life.

Some of the boys who have been at West Point, but have not graduated, enlisted in the United States army in order to get their commissions in the ranks. When a man does so enlist he may be sent as a private soldier to a company in which some classmate is a lieutenant. Now it must be remembered that there is a deep gulf between officers and enlisted men in the regular army, a gulf which it is necessary to have remain fixed, because familiarity of intercourse between officers and enlisted men would lead to lax discipline. It is not the case, as some people seem to think, that an officer is better to associate with than an enlisted man. The officers of the army hold the enlisted men in high esteem. They know that they are the backbone of the army and they know that on their loyalty, obedience and courage hangs success in war and the credit of the army in peace. Every army in the world has learned the lesson that there must be a lack of familiar intercourse in a social way between the commissioned officers and the enlisted men.

When a young fellow who has been at West Point enlists he is likely, as has been said, to get into a command in which one of his classmates may be an officer. Then it is that a curious relation results. The enlisted man meets his former classmate, whom he once called Bill or Jim and with whom he possibly roomed as a cadet, and he must simply salute him as any other enlisted man would, and pass without a sign of "familiar recognition." Now this does not mean at all that Jim or Bill does not want to speak to his former classmate. It means simply that the enlisted man wants to preserve his own standing with his fellow soldiers and does not want to put his former classmate by and chance in an embarrassing position. If the enlisted man should learn that their newly enlisted fellow was a former classmate and a friend of one of the officers, they might think that it was going to be a case of currying favor on the one side or of showing favor on the other. The man who is once a cadet and who enlists is more careful if he is built right, and he generally is, to maintain a proper attitude toward the men who rank him.

They tell a story in Washington of a young fellow who came of rich parentage, but who never had been at West Point, by the way, who enlisted in the army to get his commission. He attempted to procure the fact of his wealth and he not only got the officers down on him, but the men as well. His lot was not altogether a happy one. It can be said, however, that cases like that of this young man are few and far between. The man who is willing to enlist in order to get his commission, generally speaking, is of good stuff enough to make a soldier. He takes things as they come and is able to take more than his share of the duties and the hardships of the enlisted men with whom he is thrown.

There was once upon a time a cadet who, having spent time enough at the United States Military academy to cover a considerable part of the course, was compelled by the government to sever his connection with the school he had hoped would prove to him a fostering mother until the end.

This cadet, who shall be nameless because of a modest desire to avoid the use of the prison in the first year, and a few years after leaving the academy he walked into a Boston recruiting office and enlisted. Several classmates and several other army friends knew of the enlistment and told the enlisted one prior to his application for admission to the service to strike out for a commission, and, above all things, not to let any of the enlisted men, or any of the officers who did not know him, have knowledge of the fact that he had been at the military academy, for otherwise they might think he expected favors.

The advice was needless, for whatever else the recruit intended to do he intended that his service should be performed on the equal level with that of every other man in the United States army, but the truth is that this determination nation and its carrying out led to some complications that had humor enough at the time even though they lost the humor because of lack of power in the story-telling.

TYPES OF RECRUITS

This cadet recruit was landed at David's Island, New York harbor, where there were 700 other recruits undergoing instruction, and a green lot they were. The cadet was turned out for squad drill with five other recruits, not one of whom knew enough about soldiering to keep his heels together. A tall, raw-boned Irish sergeant, with the euphonious name of O'Dalwin, was in command of the squad. He began to explain the position of the squad. He found that the recruit on the right of the line already was in the position of a soldier. The truth was he couldn't help himself.

O'Dalwin eyed him critically. "Fall out!" he said.

The one-time cadet fell out. "What regiment did ye desert from?" said O'Dalwin, pleasantly.

"This is my first enlistment," answered the recruit, and in answering he told the truth, for a cadet isn't enlisted.

"What company are ye in?" asked O'Dalwin, though he knew perfectly well, for his own bunk was not three bunks removed from that of the recruit.

"D company," answered the queried one, and that's where he made the mistake of his life.

That apparently simple answer proved conclusively to the sergeant's mind that he had an ex-soldier before him, for all the national guardmen would have answered "Company D" instead of "D company." The regular who would speak of his command as "Company D" would be considered deriding of the guardhouse for a month, for to put the latter after the company name when it is written in the army man's height of things is mutiny.

"You go to your quarters; we'll look into this," said the sergeant.

The recruit went to his quarters and half an hour later the first sergeant of the outfit sent for him. The "Top" opened the conversation cheerfully with a query as to what regiment the recruit had left in the lurch. Finding that he was bound to be considered a deserter, the unhappy one took the bull by the horns thus: "I am serving my first enlistment in the army; I never was in the marine corps and I never saw the inside of a national guard army."

"Ever been in one of them private military schools?" asked the "Top."

"Go to your quarters."

In another hour the recruit was given a rifle and carbine box and belt and was ordered to turn out with the squad of recruits who had advanced far enough in the school of the soldier to receive lessons in the manual of arms. Now as a matter of fact the recruit knew the manual of arms so well he couldn't have hidden his knowledge if he had tried. This time there was another sergeant in charge. His eye took in the way the recruit on the left handled his piece and executed the manual.

In less than a minute the sergeant ordered him who was showing such proficiency to step to the front, and ordered "place rest" for the remainder of the squad. Then turning his attention to his victim, he said: "We'll try the bayonet exercise a bit. Guard!"

The recruit came down to "a guard" possibly with as much precision and in probably as proper style as the veteran sergeant had ever seen it done.

"Pushing yourself off for a recruit. It's a fraud you are. Get to your quarters." And the recruit went to his bunk again, knowing that he was in deep disaster.

About half an hour later he heard two old soldiers talking outside of the barracks window. One of them said to the other: "There's a cuss in there who ain't never been in the marine corps, nor in the military school, nor to one of them military schools. The sergeant says he's either a blankety-blank liar or else he isn't his soldier's from books, which ain't likely."

That night just after "atton," the first sergeant appeared and told the recruit that the company commander wanted to see him at once in the orderly room. The recruit went to the presence of the commissioned officer and stood attention as he had stood attention as a cadet a thousand times before. The captain looked him up and down. "I understand," he said, "that this is your first enlistment; that you have never been a national guard; that you have never been a marine and that you never attended a private military school."

The recruit acquiesced with a respectful "Yes, sir."

"About face,"

The recruit made an about face, and then at a repetition of the command, again faced the captain, who was grinning.

"Go to your quarters," said the commanding officer.

The recruit went and in ten minutes the top sergeant was there, saying: "You can't fool the old man. You've been made a lance corporal and you go on guard as corporal of the third regiment tomorrow morning."

There are a good many officers in the United States army today who served for a few months ago Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins died. He entered the military academy some time prior to the opening of the Civil war, but the authorities did not allow him to graduate. Hawkins was not discouraged by the failure and as soon as the Civil war broke out he offered his services to his country and was given a commission. He held in the regular army until the time of his death and so strong was his love of the military academy that before his death he asked that he might be buried in the cadet cemetery. It was Hawkins' custom each year when he could get away from his command to visit the school where he had spent three years of his boyhood. He had just as strong a love for the institution as did any graduate in the army.

Recently there has been a disposition on the part of the graduates of the military academy to give more consideration to the man who spent some time at the school, but who did not graduate. One class organization includes in its membership all the cadets who at any time were members of the class, and no distinction is made between graduate and non-graduate, even the officers of the organization being open to men who did not complete the course.

Other class organizations are said to be preparing to follow the example of that of the members of 1881 and if the custom of taking into full brotherhood the non-graduates becomes general the belief is that that goal will come to the academy and the country.

One of the world's noted modern cathedrals is St. Patrick's, in New York. Much has been written about it in the years that it has been built, but, if I mistake not, the story has hitherto remained unpublished of how a widespread lie regarding its site led to the cementing of an intimate friendship between the first American cardinal, Rt. Rev. John McCloskey, and the late Rev. Dr. Armitage, who, during the many years that he was pastor of the New York city church where John D. Rockefeller worshiped, was regarded as the leading Baptist clergyman in the United States. I received the story from Dr. Armitage's own lips shortly after he had been plunged into grief by the death of the cardinal.

"Cardinal McCloskey and I were on friendly terms before he was elevated to the cardinalate, and while he was still archbishop of New York," said Doctor Armitage. "At that time there was a widespread rumor to the effect that the site of St. Patrick's cathedral had been given free of cost by the city to the cathedral authorities by some trick of the Tammany Hall crowd. It was a rumor without the slightest foundation in fact, but kept spreading, and many people believed it, to the great worry of the archbishop, who one day confessed his inability, apparently, to do anything to stop the lie. At that time I got an idea and proceeded to explain it to the archbishop."

"I was educated as a lawyer, I said, and, in fact, I practiced a year or two ago before I abandoned the bar for the pulpit. In my opinion, day by day I was regarded as quite skillful in searching real estate titles. Now, if you wish it, I will go to the office of the register of deeds, and search the title of the cathedral plot, and when I am through I am sure you will have all the proof needed that the ground was not given to you by the city through a Tammany trick."

"The archbishop was greatly pleased at the idea. I went straightaway to work searching the title, and after several days I had a complete abstract of it as far back as it was necessary for me to go in order to refute the rumor that was causing the archbishop so much worry."

"This was the true situation. There came a time when St. Peter's church, the first Catholic church to be established in New York city, got into serious financial straits. St. Patrick's church, then in the lower part of the city and the residence of the bishop, was in a most prosperous condition, and it was appealed to for help by St. Peter's."

The assistance prayed for was given, and as security for the money loaned, St. Peter's turned over to St. Patrick's a wide piece of land beyond the northernmost bounds of the city and seemingly of little value. This land had been given to St. Peter's by an old Irishman shortly before his death—and this land it was which was used years later as a site for St. Patrick's cathedral.

"I shall never forget the pleasure and the sense of gratitude which Archbishop McCloskey expressed when I handed him in the complete abstract of my search. That abstract, which contained some facts with which he was familiar and others which were new to him, the archbishop used time after time to confute the troublesome rumor, he spoke to me of the service I had done him. It was a little thing for me to do for him, I know, but I have always been glad that I did it, for it cemented our friendship for each other and that friendship is one of the fondest memories of my life."

Brought Bankers to Time

William Windom's Story of the Way in Which He Routed Financiers Who Were Selfish and Grasping.

About a year before William Windom, who has been United States senator from Minnesota and secretary of the treasury in President Garfield's cabinet, returned to public life at the head of the treasury department in President Harrison's first cabinet in 1889, I met him in the office of a common friend. By chance the conversation turned upon some of the incidents associated with Mr. Windom's brief service in General Garfield's cabinet.

"Senator," I said, "I have always been anxious to know how it happened that you hit upon the precise plan by which you confounded and put to rout many of the great bankers and financiers of the United States in the late spring of 1891?"

The senator laughed heartily. "Why," he said, "that plan was due entirely to one of those curious chances, these accidental discoveries, out of which sometimes great triumphs come."

"You may remember that the congress which sat in the last months of President Hayes's administration passed an act authorizing the secretary of the treasury to refund a very large issue of bonds which bore five per cent. interest with a new issue bearing only three and a half per cent. It was legislation that caused the bankers of the country to be very much put out. They wanted the refunding bonds to bear at least four per cent. later on, if possible, four and a half per cent., and because they did not get what they wanted they began to surrender circulation in very large amounts, so large, in fact, that there was danger of a great stringency in the money market. As I now recall it, they surrendered about thirty millions of circulation in the course of four or five weeks, and the situation was made all the more serious by the apparent intention of the bankers to sell the government bonds which had been returned to them by the treasury when they surrendered circulation. Consequently, President Hayes, not desiring to have the money market greatly upset and the bonds probably depreciated, vetoed the refunding bill, and great was the joy of the bankers, who felt that they had won the victory."

"A few weeks later, when I became secretary of the treasury, one of the important matters that speedily came before me was those five per cent. bonds. The government would soon have to redeem them, and yet I knew that this would not be expedient, and that meant, evidently, that we would have to continue paying interest on them at the rate of five per cent."

"Well, one evening, as I was walking back and forth wondering what I could do in my dilemma, with conscience not in session, I suddenly recalled a remark by John Sherman when he was senator, to the effect that the discretionary powers of the secretary of the treasury were much larger than was generally believed to be the fact. Immediately, I determined to find out whether or not I could exercise any discretionary powers with the five per cent. bonds.

"The next day I hunted up the attorney general, Wayne MacVeach. 'Mac,' I said, 'I wish you'd look into the law and tell me whether I can extend the five per cent. bonds at a less rate of interest than they now bear without any special authority from congress. In other words, whether I have any discretionary power in the matter?' MacVeach saw the point at once, and a day or two thereafter told me that I surely had the discretionary power."

"The rest was easy. I caused it to be announced that I intended to begin paying off the five per cent. bonds at the rate of ten million dollars a month, and by lot, so that no one would know when he would be called upon to pay with his holdings. And I added that if any holder of bonds was willing that they should be extended at the rate of three per cent., and would permit such an agreement to be stamped upon the face of the bonds, and then the bonds would not be liable to immediate redemption."

"Now, you know the bankers must have government bonds in order to have circulation and the bankers, quick to see that I had them, fairly tumbled over one another in their eagerness to have their five per cent. bonds extended at three per cent., or at a rate one-half of one per cent. lower than they could have obtained had they not frightened President Hayes into vetoing the bill authorizing the treasury department to refund the five per cent. with three and a half per cent. bonds."

"It was truly laughable, and do you know, practically all of the five per cent. bonds were refunded in this manner, and all because of that happy bankers' thought of mine. And as for finishing touch to the complete rout of the bankers, congress, at its next session, passed a law forbidding the banks to surrender currency in excess of three million dollars a month. The banks could no longer dump their circulation into the United States treasury in order to frighten the government into letting them have their way."

Gen. Mead's Real Character

Often Irritable and Swayed by Passion He Could Be Courteous and Tender-Hearted on Occasion.

"As a member of the staff of Gen. George C. Meade, I came to know him well that at times—in fact, a great deal of the time—he displayed a most peevish disposition to all with whom he came in contact, so that many of the generals of the Army of the Potomac did not personally like their superior," once said to me the late Gen. George H. Sharpe, who, after the war, was a more or less prominent figure in national politics in the west.

"But I am going to tell you of a little incident that will give you some insight of the true Meade that lay underneath the coat of irritation that he so often wore."

"After the Army of the Potomac had taken up winter quarters along the banks of the James river in the latter part of 1862, there appeared at headquarters on day two Englishmen who were recognized authorities in British military circles. They carried a letter from Lord Lyons, then British minister at Washington. In the letter the minister explained that his bearers were friends of his, that they had come to this country for the special purpose of studying the movements of the Army of the Potomac, and that he, Lord Lyons, would take it as a high personal favor if such assistance as was reasonable and proper should be given to them in their study."

"Gen. Grant received the two strangers very courteously, told them that he would be glad to do all that he could to help them, and then, after pondering a moment or two, turned to me.

"Gen. Sharpe," he asked, quietly, "is there any general close at hand who is on good terms with Gen. Meade?"

"I replied that no one could be on better terms with him than myself. At that Gen. Meade's face showed the inward relief I unobtrusively felt. 'Then,' he said, 'I wish you would call on these gentlemen to Gen. Meade's headquarters, and request him for me to give them such assistance as lies within his power.'"

"Arrived at Gen. Meade's headquarters, I requested the Englishmen to remain outside for a few moments, so that I might prepare Gen. Meade for their reception. Then I entered his tent and found him, as I was half afraid that I might, in a very irritable mood. 'Something possibly something most trivial—but good wrong, and when I told him what my errand was, he let loose and swore like a trooper. But at that he said: 'Gen. Sharpe, bring your friends to me in about 15 minutes. I will receive them then.'"

"Promptly at the appointed time I entered Gen. Meade's tent with the two visitors, and what do you suppose I saw? Gen. Meade, without introducing them from head to foot in full dress uniform, never handsome in appearance, and the name of dignified and impressive presence. And when I introduced the Englishmen he received them with the utmost graciousness and put them at their ease at once. And this was the same man who had been away, by passion a short quarter of an hour before."

"Well, for nearly an hour, Gen. Meade held these Englishmen in thrall while he discoursed on the strategy of the campaign. His courtesy, his thoughtfulness, his simplicity, his modesty, his politeness at questions, completely captivated them, and when finally the interview was over, and I rode away with them they could not sound his praises loud enough. You see, he gave these men a glimpse of the Gen. George C. Meade that not many men of the Army of the Potomac got. But we of his staff knew right along that he had a tender heart, and our only regret was that, against his own good, he so often hid behind those outbursts of irritability for which he has become famous in the personal history of our Civil War."

Lie Cemented the Friendship

Doctor Armitage Helped Cardinal McCloskey Refute Falsehood Concerning Site of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

One of the world's noted modern cathedrals is St. Patrick's, in New York. Much has been written about it in the years that it has been built, but, if I mistake not, the story has hitherto remained unpublished of how a widespread lie regarding its site led to the cementing of an intimate friendship between the first American cardinal, Rt. Rev. John McCloskey, and the late Rev. Dr. Armitage, who, during the many years that he was pastor of the New York city church where John D. Rockefeller worshiped, was regarded as the leading Baptist clergyman in the United States. I received the story from Dr. Armitage's own lips shortly after he had been plunged into grief by the death of the cardinal.

"Cardinal McCloskey and I were on friendly terms before he was elevated to the cardinalate, and while he was still archbishop of New York," said Doctor Armitage. "At that time there was a widespread rumor to the effect that the site of St. Patrick's cathedral had been given free of cost by the city to the cathedral authorities by some trick of the Tammany Hall crowd. It was a rumor without the slightest foundation in fact, but kept spreading, and many people believed it, to the great worry of the archbishop, who one day confessed his inability, apparently, to do anything to stop the lie. At that time I got an idea and proceeded to explain it to the archbishop."

"I was educated as a lawyer, I said, and, in fact, I practiced a year or two ago before I abandoned the bar for the pulpit. In my opinion, day by day I was regarded as quite skillful in searching real estate titles. Now, if you wish it, I will go to the office of the register of deeds, and search the title of the cathedral plot, and when I am through I am sure you will have all the proof needed that the ground was not given to you by the city through a Tammany trick."

"The archbishop was greatly pleased at the idea. I went straightaway to work searching the title, and after several days I had a complete abstract of it as far back as it was necessary for me to go in order to refute the rumor that was causing the archbishop so much worry."

"This was the true situation. There came a time when St. Peter's church, the first Catholic church to be established in New York city, got into serious financial straits. St. Patrick's church, then in the lower part of the city and the residence of the bishop, was in a most prosperous condition, and it was appealed to for help by St. Peter's."

The assistance prayed for was given, and as security for the money loaned, St. Peter's turned over to St. Patrick's a wide piece of land beyond the northernmost bounds of the city and seemingly of little value. This land had been given to St. Peter's by an old Irishman shortly before his death—and this land it was which was used years later as a site for St. Patrick's cathedral.

"I shall never forget the pleasure and the sense of gratitude which Archbishop McCloskey expressed when I handed him in the complete abstract of my search. That abstract, which contained some facts with which he was familiar and others which were new to him, the archbishop used time after time to confute the troublesome rumor, he spoke to me of the service I had done him. It was a little thing for me to do for him, I know, but I have always been glad that I did it, for it cemented our friendship for each other and that friendship is one of the fondest memories of my life."

Bonaparte's American Wife.

Marriage of Jerome and Elizabeth Patterson Greatest Social Event in Baltimore's History.

Just two and a half years after the death and burial of "Old Mortality" on Christmas eve, 1893, all Baltimore rang with the greatest social event that the city of beautiful women had ever witnessed—the marriage of Jerome Bonaparte and Elizabeth Patterson. The groom was resplendent in a purple satin coat, heavily with costly embroidery and gold lace, whose skirt, lined with white satin, in the latest fashion of the directory beau monde, fell over his satin knee-breeches and silk hose, to the very tops of the diamond buckles, that clasped his low-cut shoes. His long, fine hair was powdered snowy white, contrasting well with his dark eyes and rich complexion.

The bride wore a white muslin dress, of diaphanous texture, such as the famous Indiana looms have made famous for centuries, which, despite rich embroidery and costly lace, revealed the beauty of arms and neck, and fitted in the extreme of a fashion that emphasized the outlines of her faultless limbs and perfect form.

"All the clothes worn by her might have been put in my pocket," wrote a lively correspondent of that letter-writing era. "Her dress was of muslin of an extremely fine texture. Beneath her dress, she wore two garments."

Congratulations and good wishes were showered upon her, and the weeks of the honeymoon were a dream of sweet madness and grateful ambition.—National Magazine.

There is a popular tradition that lightning will not kill any one who is asleep. According to one school, the splinters of a tree struck by lightning are an infallible specific for the toothache. An amusing superstition to be cherished by the boys of a village in England, who believe that if they mention the lightning immediately after a flash the seat of their trousers would be torn out. No boy could be induced to make the experiment.

To Encourage Thrift. Schoenberg, one of the municipal cities of greater Berlin, has passed an ordinance requiring its municipal savings bank to issue to each new born baby a pass book showing a deposit of one mark, or about 21 cents, presented by the city, not as a partial compensation for being required to enter this cold world, nor yet regarding the parents, but as an encouragement to thrift on the part of both child and parents.

One of Uncle Sam's Geologists Does Some Surprising Stunts in Locating Water Veins.

N. H. Darton is a government geologist who does surprising stunts in the way of finding water. The geological survey has carried on extensive investigations of underground waters, which make Mr. Darton's prophecies possible. One of his most notable successes was a well at Edgemont, S. D. Mr. Darton predicted that water should be expected in the Dundee water standabout about 3,000 feet below the surface.

Accordingly the boring was begun, but meeting with many difficulties which caused great delay and expense, there was a disposition to abandon the work.

The engineers in charge, having confidence in Mr. Darton's prediction, and their faith was finally rewarded by striking a great flow of water at a depth of 2,695 feet.

The well yields 500,000 gallons a day of top water satisfactory for domestic and other uses, and as there is not good water within sixty miles and much of the supply had to be hauled in tank cars, the value of this flow is inestimable.

In the same general section of South Dakota, as well as in other western states, many other wells from 1,350 to 2,135 feet deep have been verified

Mr. Darton's predictions and are furnishing a supply of excellent water. It is difficult to estimate the money value of a successful artesian well in an arid region, but where it obviates the need of long haulage $50,000 to $100,000 is a moderate figure.
